

Blog Title: To Repair or Replace? What You Need to Know About Toilet Repair in Atlanta

10 Tips for Choosing the Right Toilet Style

So you've determined a toilet replacement makes more sense than a repair and now you need to choose a toilet. It is likely a topic you haven't considered too often in your life, but things are about to change. It's time to become a toilet style aficionado...or at least develop some awareness that can help you to make a well-informed decision.

Does it sound ridiculous to spend time thinking about the style of your toilet? It shouldn't. You're going to spend a lot of time on that throne, friend, and so are your guests. The devil is in the details, as they say, and if you want to maintain a lovely powder room or full bath, you need a john that matches the décor.

So laugh all you want, but when you're finished chuckling, use this handy checklist to get the right toilet for you:

- Assess your current bathroom setup and determine its existing style: modern, Victorian, rustic, craftsman, art deco?
- Take a look at bathroom set-ups you appreciate—don't be a stalker, but if you happen to be in someone's home, go ahead and take a look! You may notice there are certain styles that you like and don't like and this information can help to guide you in your selection process.
- Select your main setup: one piece, two pieces or hanging from the wall?
- Choose a bowl style: front or elongated? Exposed or skirted?
- Think carefully about the color. There's more than just white and ivory. Don't be afraid to go with a retro pink or green!
- Choose hardware that matches the rest of your bathroom.
- Order the toilet in advance of your planned service, or talk to your plumber about ordering it for you.

That's it! It's a fairly simple process, with the bulk of the chores taking place in the design stage. If you're replacing your toilet on a timeline, you should still make sure to devote some time to this so you can avoid buyer's regret later.

If you want some professional advice from trusted plumbers who have seen hundreds of toilets and bathrooms all over the greater Atlanta area, turn to our team at Morningside Plumbing. We are happy to take a look at your décor and offer suggestions for the right toilet style to meet your bathroom ambiance and budget. Connect with us now online or call 404-873-1881 to get the guidance you need.